

ASSESSMENT IN HIGHER EDUCATION

Blooms' Taxonomy

Blooms' Taxonomy is a systematic way of describing how a learner's performance develops from simple to complex levels in their affective, psychomotor and cognitive domain learning. In their cognitive domain, there are six stages, namely: Knowledge, Comprehension, Application, Analysis, Synthesis and Evaluation. Traditional education tends to base the student learning in this domain.

Bloom's Taxonomy

Web References and Resources

- Blooms' Taxonomy
<https://www.bloomstaxonomy.net/>
- Bloom's Taxonomy Free Downloadable Guide
<https://tophat.com/blog/blooms-taxonomy>

To reference these pages

Copy and paste the text below:

Chan, C. (2010). Assessment: Blooms' Taxonomy, Assessment Resources@HKU, University of Hong Kong [https://ar.talic.hku.hk/]: Available: Accessed: DATE